SECONE, "Synergy for Energy, Challenges and Opportunities in North East India", a Society dedicated to work for rejuvenating the energy situation in NE India by bringing together various organisations, academic and R&D institutes, government agencies involved in the energy business and other stakeholders and evolve a road map for resurgence of NE India as a major power house of the country through synergistic efforts of various organisations. In order to achieve the above objectives, SECONE has organised various conferences and workshops.

At present, natural gas is emerging as the best choice as clean fuel for transportation, power generation and various other applications and North East India is very fortunate enough to have a large reserve of natural gas in Tripura in particular and also to some extent in neighbouring NE states. The large find of natural gas in neighbouring countries like Bangladesh and Myanmar has added additional significance to NE India and opens up a new frontier for growth.

With the above reality in view and in order to crystalize a road map for the growth of NE India in general and Tripura in particular by harnessing the power of Natural gas, SECONE planned an International conference on the topic, "The present and future of Natural Gas: Challenges and Opportunities in NE India" in collaboration with ONGC.

We are planning a poster session in the above conference to showcase R&D projects, studies, concepts originating from R&D centres, industries, academic institutes of NE India in the areas to be covered in the conference as outlined below. We at SECONE believe that the research scholars and students who are going to be technocrats, managers and policy makers of future need to actively participate in the conference so that they are aware about the present developments and will be able to think about out of the box solutions for future.
